active imagination. Jung linked active imagination with the processes of alchemy. Both strive for oneness and interrelatedness from a set of fragmented and dissociated parts. This process found expression for Jung in his Red Book. Key to active imagination is the goal of restraining the conscious waking mind from exerting influence on internal images as they unfold. Active imagination - Wikipedia Carl Jung always considered himself a scientist rather than an alchemist (of course Dr. Raff said there was another side of Jung that he was privileged to have exposed, unfortunately we can't prove that by any act of imagination or alchemical technique). Having said that Jung did shown great interest in alchemy, and alchemical emblems interpreted by Dr. Raff can surely be interpreted as one manual of psychoanalysis, for treatment guidance or actual clinical reports (i.e. dream

Jung noticed that the ancient alchemists universally saw the process of meditation and imagination (imaginatio) as essential to the alchemical Work (see Psychology and Alchemy (Collected Works of C.G. Jung Vol.12) and other works). Raff builds on Jung's work here with his own concept of the Self in relationship with the ego, and how through imagination more of the Self becomes manifest to consciousness and in a more direct relationship with the ego. Amazon.com: Customer reviews: Jung and the Alchemical ...
